Stormwater policy regulations and management techniques are constantly evolving. This presentation highlights some of the new changes and regulatory drivers to stormwater controls and policy. We will discuss current federal and regional trends and explore how they may impact the state of Idaho. We will also explain how increased knowledge of Best Management Practices ensures that personnel are more prepared to handle all projects that require control of water flow and quality.

Education and training are instrumental in achieving proper understanding and compliance. NWETC will review our general training methodologies as well as our custom private training platform.
