

Post Wildfire Changes in Watershed Response, Adapting Management to a Frequent Disturbance Regime

Bruce Sims

USDA Forest Service, Region 1

200 E. Broadway

Missoula, MT 59807

Telephone: 406-329-3447

bsims@fs.fed.us

Climate change is increasing the frequency of ecosystem disturbances (fires, floods, draughts, insect infestation, hurricanes etc.). Large magnitude disturbances reset watershed conditions to earlier stages of adjustment. This presentation gives examples of forest fire occurrence and watershed response across the intermountain west and the land management challenges that are faced.