To whom it may concern,

I have for several years attempted to burn my logging slash on days that the DEQ website says are good days for burning. I am here to tell you that I cannot get all my slash burned before the weather gets too wet and still comply with the DEQ's definition of a good burn day. If the DEQ is going to mandate this then the IDL needs to do away with the mandatory slash management requirements. We (Loggers) cannot serve two bureaucrats!! One of you has to give. I'd prefer not burning and leave the slash lay.

Sincerely,
John Kinne
